PROGRESSIV LESSONS IN VOLAPÜK.

With especial reference to commercial correspondence. *

By Charles E. Sprague.

LESSON V.

36. I must again caution you about the sounds of the five vowels a, e, i, o, u. Always pronounce them as in the English words bah bay, bee, bone, boo , never allow them to be shortened into a different sound Bed, for example, is not like the English bed, but like bade ; mit is like the English meet ; not is like the English note ; lut is like the English loot.

37. My reason for recalling these sounds now is that I am going to introduce 5 words containing these 5 vowels in regular order :

bal,   tel,   kil,   fol,   lul.

They are the five numbers.

      1   2   3   4   5

Is not that an ingenious idea? You can scarcely forget them, when once you know that the number for 1 contains the first vowel, and 5 the fifth. Repeat them, counting your fingers, and pronouncing them like Basle (the Swiss town), tale, keel, foal, lool.

38. In English we have a curious way (tho' it does not seem curious to us) of stating how many things there are before we state what kind of things are to be counted. "There are in this city five thousand three hundred and sixty-four——" what? We are in suspense, and can form no idea until we know what the 5,364 things are. It would seem more logical to have first announced what they are, and then how many; "there are in this city houses 5,364." In fact, when we write amounts of money in figures, we write the sign "dollars" before the figures: $5, not 5$.

39. This is the order always used in Volapük; "books five" for "five books;" "pens four" for "four pens;" "names three" for "three names;" "boots two" for "two boots;" "form one" for "one form." Now read the following phrases in Volapük and in English:

Peneds kil.
Pens fol.
Buts tel.
Getob penedis kil.
Spelob getön penedis lul.
Vipob selön bukis fol.
Li-vipol gebön penis lul.
No vipob gebön penis lul, vipob gebön buki bal.

Doab means dollar, and is pronounced do-ahb. Sentab (sanetahb) means cent. Read these amounts in Vp.: $5; $4; $2; 3c.; 4c.; $1.

E (pronounced like the name of the English letter A), means and. Doabs fol e sentabs lul, $4.05. Now read these amounts: $2.03; $1.02; $5.04; $4.01.

40. I will not give the other numbers, 6, 7, 8, 9, just yet, but will show you how to form higher denominations, tens, hundreds and thousands. To form the tens, or to multiply a unit by ten, add s:

bals,	tels,	kils,	fols,	luls.
10	20	30	40	50

When a number consists of two figures, the two parts are connected by e; thus, 51 is lulsebal (fifty-and-one); 42 is folsetel; 33 is kilsekil; 24 is telsefol. The numbers from eleven up are formed in the same way; balsebal (ten-and-one) 11; balsetel, 12; balsekil, 13; balsefol, 14; balselul, 15.

41. It will now be easy to read the following ; $33.33 ; $50.42; $25.05 ; $52.25.

42. The word for hundred is tum (pronounced toom). It may be used alone for " a hundred ;" $100 may be doabs baltum, or doabs tum, just as we say in English " one hundred dollars," or " a hundred dollars."

baltum,	teltum,	kiltum,	foltum,	lultum.
100	200	300	400	500

234, teltum kilsefol.
541, lultum folsebal.

43. " Thousand " is mil (meal) and is used in the same manner.

balmil,	telmil,	kilmil,	folmil,	lulmil.
1000	2000	3000	4000	5000

44. Express the following phrases in Vp.:

Do you wish to pay $250 ?
I hope to receive $4351.
I wish to use 500 books.
I write 20 letters.
I offer $24.35.
I study 45 forms.
Do you wish to make 22 purchases?

45. The processes of combination and variation may now be applied to form a large number of other sentences.

LESSON VI.

46. I shall now give the four remaining numerals, 6, 7, 8 and 9, and shall at the same time plunge you into all the remaining difficulties of pronunciation. I have deferred this till now, because I know how hard it is to acquire new sounds from reading about them. If I were teaching you in person, where you could hear me pronounce, I should begin with difficult sounds the first thing, according to Mrs. Bauer's clever suggestion.

47. Six is măl. Speak aloud and repeatedly the English words mat, mare, listening attentively to the sound of the a. It has a flat, thin sound in mat, and in most people's speech the sound in mare is the same, but prolonged. This prolonged flat sound is the sound of ă. Măl is like the beginning of mallet, but with the flat sound of the a prolonged. Here are some other words containing the same letter, and useful for our purpose : Tăv, travel ; tăvŏn, to travel ; lăn, country, land ; suăm (soo-am), price.

48. Seven is vel (vail).

49. Eight is jöl. the j is like sh ; ji is read she ; jip is read (and means) sheep ; jem is read (and means) shame ; jol is read shoal, and means shore. The ö sound you have already had in the ending ön. I ought to have stated when I explained that syllable, that the sound should be prolonged ; so that, as some of my learners have suggested, it would be a better explanation to give the word urn, with the proviso that the r should not be distinctly sounded, but slurred over. Therefore jöl is like shurl, suppressing the r, if you have any tendency to roll it.

50. Nine is zül. Courage ! this is the worst. Z is like ts, even if it comes at the beginning of a word. Try it in zi (tsee), meaning around ; zif (tseef), town ; zenod, (tsay-nóde), center, middle ; zu (tsoo), besides. Practice on this till you get the ts sound familiar. Say over zi, zef, zenod, zu, a number of times, faster and faster.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

E. N. S., MANNINGTON.—You ask whether ö should be pronounced as u in run or o in word. Each of these letters gives the sound somewhat imperfectly : u in run is too short ; o in word is apt to lead in retaining the r-sound, which, if ever so slight, is incorrect. Perhaps, with these precautions, you can steer between the difficulties.
